LIMITLESS LEARNING

THE JOB, IN PLAIN WORDS:

You step into the shoes of everyone who uses our platform: the student, the parent, the teacher, the admin. You go through their day, spot what's slow, confusing or broken, and write down how it should work instead, and why.

DAY TO DAY, YOU WILL BE:

- Running 3–4 simulations a day, testing anything new first
- Setting up test users, like a student joining class on a phone or a parent checking results
- Mapping the workflows people use most
- Spotting friction: extra steps, confusing screens, unclear wording and dead ends
- Writing simple, non-technical notes on how each workflow should work, and why
- Coordinating each simulation and getting its plan approved
- Re-testing after fixes go live to make sure things actually got better

LIMITLESS LEARNING

TO APPLY FOR THIS POSITION YOU WILL NEED:

- Strong problem solving and critical thinking: you don't just spot problems, you come with a better way
- Imagination, good taste and judgement: you can tell 'works' from 'works well'
- Great coordination: you juggle lots of small moving parts without dropping any
- To be self-driven and write clearly, with reasons behind every point
- To be comfortable with lots of apps and web tools. No coding needed

NICE TO HAVE:

- A bachelor's degree in business, IT, design or similar
- Exposure to UX, project management or business analysis

THIS POSITION IS OPEN FOR LOCALS ONLY

YOU'LL PROBABLY BE GREAT AT THIS IF YOU'VE:

- Been the person who always notices what's wrong with a process, and fixed it
- Coordinated people across teams to get one thing done
- Improved how something works at a job, club or business without being asked
- Been the one friends or colleagues come to when something is confusing

WHAT WE OFFER:

- A friendly, respectful and fun working environment
- A competitive salary, reviewed as you grow in the role
- A say in product decisions as you prove your judgement
